

Physicians strengthen Delaware's economy

Delaware's office-based physicians ensure the health and well-being of their communities. A recent report by The Lewin Group proves they also strengthen Delaware's economy by creating jobs, purchasing goods and services, supporting wages and benefits, and generating state and local tax revenue.¹ The people of Delaware benefit directly when the state creates a positive practice environment for physicians. By attracting and keeping physicians in the state, the people of Delaware have better access to health care and a stronger state economy.

- Jobs: Office-based physicians support more than 11,000 jobs in Delaware
- Output: Office-based physicians contribute $2.6 billion in economic output or sales revenue, representing 4.3 percent of the total GDP in Delaware
- Wages & Benefits: Office-based physicians in Delaware generate almost $2 billion in wages and benefits
- Taxes: Office-based physicians generate more than $115 million in state and local tax revenue in Delaware

In addition to supporting the state economy, physicians also give back to their community by providing charity care. In 2008, physicians provided an estimated $24.4 billion in charity care on a nationwide basis.²
