

About the Integrated Physician Practice Section (IPPS)

Become an IPPS leader

The IPPS governing council provides strategic direction to the section and oversees the section's programs and activities.

All Governing Council positions are open for election at the upcoming IPPS June 6 virtual meeting.

Make sure to submit the application (PDF) by the May 7 deadline. For additional information, please contact Carrie Waller at carrie.waller@ama-assn.org.

Join the Integrated Physician Practice Section

To become certified as an Integrated Physician Practice Section representative, please complete the certification form (PDF) and return it via email to ipps@ama-assn.org.

Visit the IPPS Get Involved page for information on how to participate in IPPS committees.

IPPS Policy Development Committee

Do you or does someone in your organization have a special interest in health care policy? If so, please consider serving on the IPPS Policy Development Committee. The committee is co-chaired by Michael Glenn, MD, Chair, IPPS Governing Council; and Barbara Spivak, MD, IPPS member. Most of the committee's work is done online in the two months leading up to the annual and interim Meetings. To learn more, please contact Carrie Waller at carrie.waller@ama-assn.org.

Physician-led integrated health systems

There are various factors to consider when deciding whether to join or align with a physician-led integrated health system and IPPS has developed A Guide to Joining or Aligning With a Physician-led Integrated Health System (PDF) to assist you in your decision.

Whether a resident, physician in independent practice or a mid-career physician, the guide provides detailed analysis on various issues, including:

- Types of physician-led integrated health systems available
- Assessing the performance of a physician-led integrated health system
- Determining which physician-led integrated health system is the right fit
- Aligning options for independent practices

Our mission

The mission of the Integrated Physician Practice Section is to advance, through policy and education, the interests of multispecialty, physician-led, integrated health care delivery, and groups actively working toward such systems of coordinated care.

The governing council recommends to the AMA Board of Trustees the appointments of representatives to medical education organizations, accrediting bodies and certification boards. Learn more about our governing council members who represent a broad spectrum of physician-led integrated systems and practice settings.
