Medical Student Section (MSS) Regions

Medical Student Section Regions offer support and knowledge

Medical Student Section Regions represent seven regions. Each region possesses leadership who are responsible for the policy development at the regional level through caucusing and working closely with the MSS Governing Council At Large Officer. Further, they facilitate interaction between new and well-established local campus sections, foster collaboration between local medical school sections, and communicate and represent the needs of their region to the MSS. MSS Regions also provide a structure for the election of regional delegates and regional alternate delegates.

Annually, the regions host Physicians of the Future Summits in January and February, which allow for educational programs and further discussion on policy development relevant to each region and its membership.
For additional opportunities to get involved with the AMA-MSS at the national level, please visit the Medical student leadership opportunities page.

Join us on our Facebook page to collaborate, advocate, and discuss public health topics that matter to you.