Physicians of the Future Summit—Region 5
Annually, the Medical Student Section regions host Physicians of the Future Summits which allow for educational programs and further discussion on policy development relevant to each region and its membership.

In 2022 the region summits were held virtually Feb. 5.

Summit highlights

- A panel of experienced leaders in the field of diversity and inclusion including Erica Lynne Taylor, MD, (Wright State University), Alvaro J. Tori, MD, (Indiana University), and Keith M Reisinger-Kindle, MD, (Wright State University) reflected on the cultural and institutional efforts needed to promote equity in medical education.
- The co-director of the Program on Physician Well-Being at the Mayo Clinic presented a keynote on physician burnout and wellness, highlighting factors in the medical field that are detrimental to sustainable practice as well as strategies for mitigating workplace fatigue and depersonalization.
- The region's resident panel spanning programs in pediatrics, radiation oncology, internal medicine and psychiatry engaged our region in lessons of their post-graduate training—including the importance of note-taking practices and adjusting to the first months of intern year.

Summits joint session

This year all regions convened for a joint session on Feb. 5 from noon.-2 p.m. Central, which was followed by separate region summits.

Agenda

See the agenda tab for more information on the region 5 summit, or download the PDF.

Summit access

The summit was held on the Zoom platform.
