

Private Practice Physician Section

Keshni Ramnanan, MD is a board-certified Internal Medicine physician and serves as Chief Medical Officer of Oak Medical. Her career interests include patient education and counseling, and working with patients and their families in medical decision-making.

Dr. Ramnanan has been very involved in quality improvement programs to help enhance the patient care experience and quality of care. She has also taught and mentored physician assistant students, focusing on maximizing her students' capacity to take care of patients when working in teams with physicians.

She is also very involved in physician and patient advocacy at the local level with the Waukesha County Medical Society; state level with Wisconsin Medical Society and American College of Physician Wisconsin Chapter; and national level with the American Medical Association.

Over the last year, she has served on the AMA PPPS Governing Council and is committed to ensuring that private practice continues to be an option for physicians. She is also committed to preserving that the integrity and independence of private practice is preserved for generations to come.